

Claudine Laabs paints with light, capturing the magic of nature with her lens. She was drawn to the Everglades after being entranced by a flurry of wading birds in an Everglades pond, and her course was set — Claudine discovered that she was a naturalist at heart.

She has spent most of her career photographing prolifically in the Everglades, the Amazon, and more recently in the rainforests of Panama. Claudine's work has been published by the World Wildlife Fund and the Audubon Society, as well as in publications including Natural History and U.S. News and World Report. Her solo exhibitions include Boca Raton Museum of Art and the Historical Museum of South Florida. Claudine is the past president of the Audubon Society of the Everglades, Palm Beach County Chapter.

Claudine feels that wildlife does not have a voice. She would like to be their voice and remind people that we share the earth. She gives slide presentations of her photography, and leads birding and photo expeditions throughout Florida's wetlands, the Amazon and Panama.

*"I go out looking for something magical.
I believe in magical reality...it's still a matter of luck, and being in the right place at the right time"*
